The American Society of Pain and Neuroscience is teaming up with Ethos Laboratories to investigate the relationship of urine-measured biomarkers with pain interventions. See what ASPN President Dawood Sayed said about it here.

"Pain is very challenging to treat, because patients experience pain in very different ways. We want to see if there is something we can see by running a simple urine test to pick up on some abnormality and be able to intervene based on these abnormalities." –Dawood Sayed, president, American Society of Pain and Neuroscience
