

18 Oct 2018 | News

QUOTED. Oct. 18, 2018. Charlie Dent.

by

Many are awaiting the outcome of the upcoming US midterm congressional elections. But its unlikely the newly elected Congress will end up passing much legislation, if the Democrats take control of the House of Representatives, as expected. Some of former Congressman Charlie Dent's expectations here.

"I think oversight will be the order of the day, they'll be pounding their shoes and then in 2020 depending on who wins the presidency, that's when it gets really interesting in terms of legislation that actually crosses the finish line and gets signed into law." – Charlie Dent, former Republican congressman from Pennsylvania

- Find out more: Lots of Oversight But Little Legislation Expected If Dems Take House

Click here for a free trial of Medtech Insight