

11 Dec 2018 | Analysis

QUOTED. Dec. 12, 2018. Victor Roberts.

by

In the second part of Medtech Insight's two-part series on the blood glucose monitoring devices market, Victor Roberts, an endocrinologist at the University of Central Florida in Orlando, said that some diabetes apps can be a useful tool for managing diabetes, but patients and doctors should be careful not to overrely on them.

"There has to be a sense by the physician that the use of diabetes technology is not the destination – not to be enamored with the high-tech toys that we now have at our disposal ... It's a GPS to get us to our destination. " - Victor Roberts, endocrinologist, University of Central Florida

- Find out more: Market Intel: Managing Diabetes With Digital Apps: Physicians' Views On Pros And Cons

Click here for a free trial of Medtech Insight