A Medical Device Innovation Consortium (MDIC) workgroup has partnered with Pathway for Patient Health to create a Quality Science Education framework that can be used by any university free-of-charge. See what Jackie Kunzler, a chief quality officer for device-maker Baxter International, said about it here.

"When I came to the quality department at Baxter four years ago, I was assessing the talent, and what I found was that I had a bunch of history and English majors who fell into quality because they had nowhere else to go. [That's] why we need to establish a quality discipline at the university level to educate students about the benefits of making quality part of their future career." – Jackie Kunzler, chief quality officer, Baxter International Inc.
