If President Trump appoints, and the Senate approves, a new conservative justice for the Supreme Court to replace Ruth Bader Ginsberg, Affordable Care Act coverage could disappear. See what Kyle Sampson, a partner with the Washington, DC law firm King & Spalding said about it here.

“The individual mandate was the critical lynchpin to force everyone to buy into the insurance marketplace, but severability of the individual mandate from other parts of the ACA is still possible.” – Kyle Sampson, partner, King & Spalding
