Pew Charitable Trusts urged the Biden administration to undo Trump-era changes to regulation of laboratory developed tests (LDTs) and hand their control to the US Food and Drug Administration in a letter signed by Liz Richardson , the group's project director for health care products.

“The current crisis has further highlighted the urgent need for a uniform, commonly understood regulatory framework for all in vitro clinical tests and one that appropriately balances the need for rapid innovation with the need to ensure test quality.” – Liz Richardson, Project Director, Health Care Products, Pew Charitable Trusts
